

Outward-looking course

Presentation

Outward-looking classes are delivered by university lecturers from all over the world. They address specific topics, thus helping you to broaden your horizons, by allowing you to somewhat step outside the scope of the program, and to choose a topic that interests you. These classes can be conducted in French, but also in English, or in Spanish. Each year a list of several courses is distributed to students so that they can make their selection at the beginning of the year and indicate the outward-looking course for which they wish to be assessed.
