

General Knowledge

Presentation

The method conference in general knowledge is based on a transversal approach combining the application of knowledge and critical thinking (understood in the etymological sense of the word "critical": "having the knowledge, ability, or discernment to pass judgment").

It provides an opportunity to merge knowledge from different disciplines in the fields of human and social sciences, taught at Sciences Po Bordeaux. It combines different disciplines and types of knowledge, as a basis for a reflection on the contemporary world. It enables students to develop critical thinking skills by helping them to gain perspective on current issues, by examining problems from a diachronic and a synchronic point of view. The class combines a method based on written and oral expression, acquisition and further development of knowledge, and builds on solid spatial and temporal benchmarks (importance of history and geography, history of ideas) and promotes the development of informed personal opinions. In the fourth year, a theme-based approach related to the students' majors is introduced.

Recommended Prerequisite(s)

A good knowledge of contemporary history; constant and thorough monitoring of current affairs; reading classic and contemporary works on a regular basis.
