

Institutions of the Fifth Republic

Presentation

"Constitutional public authorities", "parliamentary assemblies", "territorial authorities of the Republic", "administrative and judicial authorities", "political parties and groups" are all legal categories used by the Constitution of 4 October 1958 to cover the various institutions of the Fifth Republic. While new categories have been added by successive constituent assemblies, others no longer exist. However, all those that have lasted through the sixty years of the regime - such as the President of the Republic or the Court of Cassation - have undergone changes in both their status and their powers. The purpose of this lecture course is to study the constitutional system that the Institutions of the Fifth Republic constitute. The aim is to present them, to understand the changes they have undergone since their foundation and to understand, by examining their interactions, the institutional balance that has been created under the Fifth Republic, which is still being called into question, either by the constituted or the constituent authorities.

Recommended Prerequisite(s)

Examination of key texts: Constitution of 4 October 1958, the 1789 Declaration of the Rights of Man and of the Citizen, the Preamble to the Constitution of 1946, the Charter of the Environment.

The students will use the knowledge gained in Year 1: French political institutions, Introduction to political science and French political history.
