

International Law and Migration

Descriptif

Approximately 258 million people, or roughly 3 % of the world's population, live outside their country of origin or habitual residence – the highest number ever recorded. Of these, approximately 10 %, or about 25 million people, have fled their country as refugees – the largest number since WWII. Millions of civilians have fled or are fleeing their homes, escaping from war and terror, hunger and persecutions, ecological disasters and poverty.

En bref

Crédits ECTS : 3.0

Nombre d'heures : 18.0

Temporalité : Semestriel

Type d'enseignement : Cours magistral

Année : 4 | Quatrième année

Mode de validation : Examen terminal oral

Contacts

Responsable(s)

Examens

Le nombre de crédits ECTS et les modalités d'évaluation sont susceptibles d'être différents pour les étudiants en programmes d'échange à crédits.

Formule pédagogique

Reading will focus on three strands: (1) theoretical – introduction to basic notions of international law, with a focus on International Refugee Law, International Human Rights Law, International Maritime Law and International Criminal Law; (2) doctrinal – applicable treaties, laws, directives, regulations and case law; and (3) evidentiary - reports by UN agencies, NGOs and forensic investigations.